THEOLIA enters the NEXT 150 Index

THEOLIA has announced that it was admitted to the Next 150 Index on 2 January 2008. The Next 150 Index, first published on 2 October 2000, is a market capitalisation weighted index of the 150 next largest stocks following the selection of the Euronext 100 Index. The Next 150 Index represents the large to mid capitalisation segment of listed stocks at Euronext.

The Next 150 Index ground rules ensure that the constituents of the index can be viewed as representative of the large to mid capitalisation stocks traded on Euronext. Each stock undergoes a screening process whereby ill-liquid stocks are removed from the selection of the investment universe. Each stock must reach a trade velocity ratio of 20% per annum.

The Next 150 Index is reviewed quarterly. This review process ensures the index accurately represents the underlying market of the Euronext. The review process runs size and liquidity analysis on the investment universe to ensure the current constituents comply with the index ground rules, and also in order to recognise any important additions and deletions to the index caused by performance changes.

Each stock within the Next 150 Index is allocated a sector classification. The sector classification system facilitates sector breakdown analysis of the Euronext market.

Jean-Marie Santander, president and chief executive officer said : “THEOLIA’s admission in the NEXT 150 Index confirms the company’s continuous growth and once again demonstrates its ability to combine sustainable environment and profitability.”
