Prodways Group bolsters its relationships with leading players in the chemical industry for 3D printing

Prodways Group today announces new sales of selective laser sintering machines to the leaders in industrial chemistry for R&D and manufacturing applications. With these different sales, Prodways Group is bolstering its relationships with its longtime material suppliers.

In addition to multiple sales to DSM and BASF announced today, Prodways announces the sale of one ProMaker P1000 to a leading French chemical company. The selective laser sintering 3D printer will enable to develop and test cutting-edge products.

The acquisition of Prodways machines by the leading players in the chemical industry unlocks new potential thanks to the mutual exchange of high level expertise in the respective domains: 3D printer manufacturing and part production for Prodways, and advanced materials development for the chemical companies.

These multiple sales of plastic additive manufacturing machines to leading international chemical companies confirm the growing importance of 3D printing for advanced applications at industrial scale.
